It is now fourteen years since the Jewish Children's Museum (JCM) welcomed its very first visitors, offering them innovative education, helping them grow through advanced technology and hands-on experiences. The number 14 corresponds to the Hebrew word יָד - "Yad", meaning hand, and we have learned its message.

We have made it our mission to bring people together with knowledge and understanding. We have extended our hand to children of all faiths and ethnicities with "Town Hall" meetings that promote an atmosphere of tolerance and respect. We have included everyone, no matter how different we may seem, to discover more about Jewish history and culture.

Our purpose at the museum, every morning, is to cross a bridge we've never crossed before; to give and share with those that want to learn, to reach our hand out beyond our borders. We have worked hard for 14 years to do our part in making this world a kinder, more thoughtful place.

We are celebrating that we have merited to accomplish so much in these 14 years. The JCM was born to combat hate, a living memorial to Ari Halberstam, a tenth-grader who was killed by a terrorist on the Brooklyn Bridge 25 years ago. Each day at the JCM we continue to do our work in his memory. As we reach our 14th year, the year of Yad, we commit to extending our hand even further, to spread Ari's message of education through respect much more than before.
